

Celestine Manno

Known for her vulnerable songwriting and emotionally rich live performances, indie rock artist Celestine Manno has been described as “a dreamy blend of nostalgic grit and modern shimmer.” Her debut album Once You’ve Seen It All, co-produced with Chris Funk of the Decemberists, was recorded at Floki Studios in Iceland and released via Floki Studios and Color Red Music. After moving to New York City in 2024, Celestine quickly found a home in the local indie scene, playing across the city and connecting with listeners through her compelling shows. With new singles already rolling out for 2025, an EP ready for release, and a second album in the works, she continues to carve out a sound that’s tender, dynamic, and deeply human.

“...an artist who knows how to make the old feel new and the new feel timeless.”
-Where The Music Meets

“...the record is hinged on nostalgia, self-belief and the power of determination.”
-Earmilk

“...inspires admiration on several fronts, but none more fervently than its lyrical prowess.”
-Indie Shuffle
